DIGITAL ME

According to the forecast of a number of futurists, such as Ray Kurzweil and Vernor Vinge, in 2040, humanity expects an intellectual breakthrough, after which technological progress will become so fast and complex that it will be beyond the understanding of people. This will be possible after the creation of artificial intelligence, which will generate a generation of machines of a new technological level, and those, in turn, will create a new "offspring".

The series tells the story of people who live in this era. The Creator and his Creation have changed places. People are a kind of Pets for cars. Robots study people, their behavior and way of thinking, as well as today people study animals. The most mysterious and inaccessible to understanding machines feature of human nature — feelings. And the most mysterious manifestation of feelings is love. What makes people do illogical, contrary to personal gain, actions? What is love: a biological flaw (bug) of the thinking system homo sapiens or perfect, superior to the mind of robots, behavioral technology?

Can a Robot love a Human? What if a robot's love for a human being is deadly to him, and any protest and attempt to save his life is perceived by the machine as a rejection of love? If the mechanisms of the soul? Can there be mixed marriages of humans and robots? Could they have children? One series — one story about a complicated and contradictory relationship of Humans and Machines.

WINGS OF LOVE

A strange and horrifying disaster has occurred a few kilometers from an airport in China. A car in the express train connecting the airport with the city has been inexplicably sealed during a trip and filled with poison gas. The train pulls into the city with its grisly burden - all the passengers are dead.

Experts believe the reason for this tragic event was either malfunctioning software or some crucial defect in the construction of the train. Coincidentally, this disaster unfolded the day before a major purchase of these trains for several airports around the country. There is more to it, however. Two passengers - a stewardess for a Chinese airline and a passenger on the flight with her - left the ill-fated car just minutes before the train departed. They are under suspicion.

LOST IN RUSSIA

Russian businessman Ostapov, desperately needs to make money. He is responsible for financial losses at several companies and the governor is threatening him with violence. By chance, he hears about Mr. Cheng, a young Chinese millionaire who is looking for a Russian bride. Ostapov devises a clever plan to make money exploiting Mr. Cheng's quest for a bride. He hires his ex-girlfriend Nina, who works with the Chinese as a translator. Posing as a marriage agency, they write a letter to Mr. Cheng inviting him to come to Russia and choose a bride. Cheng accepts the invitation. Simultaneously Ostapov tells the Governor that he has found a Chinese investor ready to invest in local businesses. The Governor agrees to forgive Ostapov if the investor provides money. In Russia, Ostapov and Nina give Cheng tours of various enterprises introducing him to the women who work there. Nina explains to him in Chinese that these are his potential brides. Cheng is very happy. The business executives see his enthusiasm and assume he is ready to invest. While these "negotiations" are going on, Nina remembers how badly Ostapov used to treat her and quits. Ostapov urgently needs to find a new translator. He finds Lena, a student, who doesn't know Chinese well but she agrees because she desperately needs money. Cheng notices that Lena's Chinese is very poor and she asks him not to tell Ostapov because he will fire her. Lena goes on to tell Mr. Cheng Ostapov's plan and he promises not to betray her. In the midst of a dangerous situation, Cheng behaves bravely and Lena falls in love with him. Cheng understands that he has found his bride.
